خَلَقَ آدَمَ وَخَلَقَ حَوَاءَ: وَمِنْ ضُلْعِهِ كَانَتْ حَوَاءُ

Today's topic is complex and arduous. It is a discourse on the very first genesis of humanity. It concerns the origin of the human male and the origin of the human female. This article examines the creation of Adam and Eve, with particular focus on the creation of Eve from Adam's rib. This discourse specifically concerns the first man, Adam, and the first woman, Eve. It therefore does not at all concern the creation of the men and women who came after them, as the secondary creation process has its own entirely different laws. This is an important detail that required clarification.

Now, returning to the creation of Adam and Eve, the divine declaration is clear and explicit in this regard. Adam and Eve were created from a single soul. And from Adam's soul, Eve came into being and existence. I will explore with you the scientific possibility of such a creation. I will discuss the far-reaching implications and the scientific significance of such a divine declaration. Given the precise and difficult nature of this topic for non-specialists, I will use illustrations and animations to elucidate what is challenging for the mind to grasp. Upon these, I build my arguments and logic. I begin directly with the Human Mother Stem Cell.

The primordial human cell, the Mother Stem Cell, contained the basic genetic blueprint for modern humans. Within its repositories, it held the precursor of the sex chromosome for both genders. I hypothesize that this primordial pair was the XX chromosomal pair. Driven by its innate instinct for survival, the Mother Stem Cell sought to reproduce and increase its number. The monumental event was the product of this desire. It adhered to the conditions and laws governing the process of asexual reproduction, Mitosis. Yet, a terrible error marred the progression of its life.

It duplicated its genetic store, as it must. And it intended, as is its right, to divide it equally between its two daughter cells. However, an error in division occurred, and the two structures ended up with different shares. Due to a division error, one cell retained an extra segment from its twin's X chromosome and forcibly annexed it to its own X chromosome. The latter swelled with its gain, while the former became truncated in its loss. The truncated chromosome became the male sexual chromosome Y, the associate of masculinity. The swollen chromosome became the female sexual chromosome, the precursor of the Barr Body and the counterpart of femininity; see the figures below.

The Human Mother Stem Cell

It contained the fundamental genes for modern humans. The most important of all, undoubtedly, was the XX chromosomal pair. It is the precursor of the two sexual chromosomal pairs for both genders, male and female. To reach its full potential, it was in a state of neutrality, having not yet adopted a sexual orientation; that is, it was an asexual chromosomal pair.

(1): The Human Mother Stem Cell in Asexual Reproduction
(Mitosis - Early Prophase)

*The Human Mother Stem Cell entered the phase of asexual reproduction (Mitosis).
It began by duplicating its store of genes in preparation for an equitable division between its two daughter cells.*

(2): The Human Mother Stem Cell in Asexual Reproduction
(Mitosis - Late Prophase)

*The mitotic spindle formed, and the two centrosomes of the division spindle formed.
The spindle microtubules attached to the genes in preparation for separating the twins from each other in two opposite directions.*

(3): The Human Mother Stem Cell in Asexual Reproduction
(Mitosis - Anaphase)

Here, the sin of cellular division occurred. A "rib" was torn from the X chromosome of one of the daughter cells and attached to the X chromosome of its twin. This is the fundamental sin of our existence as humans in the form we are in. A sin for which humanity continues to pay the price of its instigation to this day.

(4): The Human Mother Stem Cell in Asexual Reproduction
(Mitosis - Telophase)

The Human Mother Stem Cell continued its division. Here, the usurped rib gradually merges with the X chromosome of the dominant daughter cell.

(5): The Human Mother Stem Cell in Asexual Reproduction
(Mitosis - Cytokinesis)

The Human Mother Stem Cell completed its asexual reproduction. It ultimately resulted in two non-identical daughter cells. Rather, they are complete opposites in every way, except in their origin. All of this, in essence and detail, stems from a rib excised from the X chromosome of the losing daughter cell, which the winning daughter cell annexed as a precious gain.

(6): The Human Mother Stem Cell in Asexual Reproduction
(Image Phase)

*The daughter cell that usurped the rib differentiated into the first female being: Eve.
The daughter cell that lost its rib assumed the role of the first man of creation:
Adam.*

You have undoubtedly sensed the nature of this "rib," lost between two cells, one losing and one gaining, which acted to distinguish their sexes. It is the rib of Adam, the basis for the manifestation of gender. The daughter cell that lost this rib yielded the first man, Adam. While the daughter cell that gained it differentiated and yielded the first woman, Eve.

Thus, from a sin in cellular division came our father Adam, and from it also came our mother Eve. The essence of the sin was a rib plucked from the origin of Adam and joined to the origin of Eve. It is the fundamental sin of our existence as humans. A sin that has long angered the heavens and vexed the earth... and still does.

Here are my arguments, and here is the sequence of my logic. It is, without doubt, the revelation of a mind that has journeyed afar. It is, undoubtedly, the harbinger of an intellect that has rebelled. I intended it as a search into uncharted territories that insisted on resistance. I intended it as sentiments of the heart that denied everything except liberation. It is a discovery that paved the way for many other discoveries. From the secrets of the creation of the human male and female from a single soul, to the secret of Eve's creation from Adam's rib, to the implications of the Barr Body as a witness to creation, to what has long perplexed scientists in their long-standing conjectures and suppositions about the sex of the fetus – all of these are now within the grasp of mind and thought.

These are scientific proofs and a research trajectory I place in your hands. Whether you accept them or discard them, the honor of the leap lies in the pursuit of excellence, whether the leaper attains the truth or falls as a martyr at its doorstep... it makes no difference!
